President Eliot in Address Sharply Criticises Public School System.

BEAUTY AND DEMOCRACY.

America Has Thus Far Failed to Take Proper Account of Sense of Beauty.

(By Associated Press.)
BUFFALO, N. Y., May 3i.—The Albright
Art Gallery was dedicated to-day in the presence of ten thousand people. Ralph
H. Plumb, president of the Buffalo Fine
Arts Academy, presided. President Plumb introduced Charles William Ellot, president of Harvard University, who delivered an address on "Beauty and Democracy." Richard Watson Gilder read a Bedicatory poem, entitled "A Temple of Art."

President Eliot, in his address, severely President Eliot, in his address, severely criticised the present public school system in the United States, in that it gives too much time to compound numbers, stenography and similar studies and too little to cultivation of a sense of appreciation of the beautiful. "The main object in every school should be not to project the children with means of earning n livelihood," said he, "but to show them how to live, a happy and worthy life, inspired by ideals which exalt and dignify Inspired by ideals which exait and dignify both labor and pleasure. To see beauty and to love it is to possess large securities for such a life. It is monstrous that the common school should give much time to compound numbers, bank discount and stenography, and little time to drawing. It is monstrous that the school which prepares for college should give four or five hours a week for two years to Greek, and no time at all to drawing.

"All children should learn how lines straight and curved, and lights and shades form pictures, and may be made to express symmetry and beauty. All shades form pictures, and may be made to express symmetry and beauty. All children should acquire by use of pencil and brush power of observation and exactness in copying, and should learn through their own work what the elements of beauty are. After reading, speling, writing and ciphering with small numbers and in simple operations, drawing should be the most important common school subject.

Increase the satisfactions and Joys life for the great mass of the people, e final aim of government by the peo-for the people is to increase to the ple for the people is to increase to the highest possible degree, and for the great-est possible number of persons, the pleas-urable sensations or cheerful feelings which contribute to make life happy, and to reduce to the lowest terms the pre-ventable evils which go to make life miserable.

"Among the means of increasing inno-rent, pleasurable sensations and emo-tions for multitudes of men and women, none is more potent than the cultivation mone is more potent than the cultivation of the sense of beauty.

"The enjoyment of beauty is unselfish. When one solitary man feels it, he does not, by his own enjoyment of it, deprive any other creature of the same felicity; on the contrary, in most instances his enjoyment is much enhanced by sharing it with sympathetic souls.

"It is undeniable that the American democracy, which found its strongest and most durable springs in the ideals of New England Purltanism, has thus far failed to take proper account of the sonse of beauty as means of happiness and to provide for the training of that sense.

"The provision of public museums like "The provision of public museums like "The provision of public museums like this beautiful structure, whose opening we commemorate to-duy, is another means of educating the popular sense of beauty. For training the eye to the appreciation of beautiful compositions in color, good paintings are necessary. Unfortunately our barbarous legislation, taxing imported works of art, piles on the natural difficulties of our situation a serious artificial obstruction. One of the great Services of the Roman Church to the peoples of Europe has been the free exhibition, as altar pieces or as chancely and sacristy decorations, of many of the exhibition, as altar pieces or as chancel and sacristy decorations, of many of the most admirable works of the leading painters of the world. Such pictures the Roman Church kept before millions of its worshippers for hundreds of years. Since he Church has had only a slight aeshetic function in the United States, public collections have in America even greater importance than they have in Durope.

rial for developing and training the sense of beauty in the masses of the population. The attraction of sex becomes efficient when the eye is delighted by the color, form and grace of the beloved object. The lover's senses are all quickened and set on fire, and his vital energies are magnified. His fancy and his power of attention become lively and keen; and, in short, all his vital functions are made healthier and stronger. It follows from this almost universal experience that the enjoyment of beauty accompanies and announces a condition of health and vigor in the human body and the human spirit, and that whatever promotes the public health, or, in other words, the habitual health of the multiply the pleasurable feelings which accompany the observation of beauty. Whatever promotes the public happiness which the recognition and study of beauty is titled to procure for the popular masses."

SOUTHERN SEMINARY.

Successful Close of a Highly Prosperous Session.

(Social to The Times-Dispatch)

BUENA VISTA, VA., May 31.—This commencement was one of the happlest the Southern Seminary has ever had in the thirty-seven years of its history.

The baccalaureate sermon on Sunday, by Rev. J. S. Engle, of Baitlimore, editor of the Baitlimore Southern Methedist, and Sunday evening, before the Missionary, Society, by Rev. H. M. Canter, of Roanoke, and the annual address on Monday, by Rev. J. T. Thompson, Buena Vista, Va., were all generally regarded as among the most appropriate and helpful ever delivered here.

The gradualing exercises on Monday, where all generally regarded as among the most appropriate and helpful ever delivered here.

The gradualing exercises on Monday, worning were particularly interesting. As is usual with this institution, there were not many diplomas. One of the most striking and significant things about the commencements is the fact that the institution delivers very few, which is the best evidence of careful and conscient/ous manner in which it is doing this most important work of female education. There were no full diplomas at all, and only two regular graduating diploma, which were in the literary course, which is not a extensive as the full course required for full graduation. What was more significant was the fact that there were but few diplomas in schools, in comparison with the number of students in the institution.

The annual art exhibit on Monday at 4 P. M. was considered particularly fine, while the final recital by pupils in elocution and music last evening at 5 o'clock was considered to be the most interesting ever witnessed here or elsewhere. It is section that an audience at a commencement occasion follows with such deep and unflagging interest from the beginning to the end all the parts of the programme. The child for the programme, and the music incidental to them. The young ladies who took part in these scanes were Miss Delong, of Botetourt county; Miss Walton, of Luray; Miss Andrews, of Rohanok, in the beautiful results in the health

HAMMON'S MURDER. Jury Out and No Verdict Was Expected Until To-day.

Expected Until To-day.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C. May 31.—
The J. W. Hammons murder case was given to the jury at 5 o'clock this afternoon, and at 9 o'clock to-night the twelve men are still out. It is not expected that a verdict will be rendered before to-morrow. The general impression appears to be that the defendant, Hammons, will be convicted of murder in either the first or second degree.

His counsel, in their argument to the jury to-day, practically admitted that their client was guilty of murder in the second degree, for fatally shooting his wife in this city April 29th.

Sell Bust of Lee.

Governor Montague has received a letter from Prof. G. Trentanove, the eminent sculptor of Florence, asking that the State purchase his bust of General Fitzhugh Lee, now in the State Library building. Cav. Trentanove, who did the Pere Marquette and Daniel Webster statues for the United States government, is anxious that Virginia should ment, is anxious that Virginia should own the Lee bust, and for that reason offers the work at the State's own price. The bust was in the rotunda of the Capitoi until the building was dismantled when it was moved to the State Library building, where it has attracted much and favorable attention.

Report Progress in Work During Year, and Express Hope for Future.

(By Associated Press.)

LAKE MOHONK, N. Y., May 31.—The annual Lake Mohonk Conference on Arbitration was begun here to-day. The opening address was made by the president, Judge George Gray, who was followed by Dr. Benjamin F. Trucblood, in an address on "The Year's Progress in International Arbitration." Judge Gray said in part:

ternational Arbitration." Judge Gra, said in parti:

"We do not need to argue any question as to the necessity, propriety or practicability of international arbitration. We have only need to proclaim the insistence of the good people of this country that the time is now ripe for doing what so many, if not all, right-thinking people believe ought to be done, that waking realization should reliable to the solid argue that the season the featers of thought and humanity throughout the ages. It is a significant sign of the progress that the cause of international arbitration has made in the ten years during which these conferences have been held that in the discussion which preceded the refusal by the Senate to ratify any of the arbitration treatles sent to it by the President, no voice was heard in opposition to the principle of international arbitration, or at least none important enough or strong enough to gain a national hearing. The scoffer is no longer applicated, and if there were any who believed in the impracticability of substituting the arbitrament of reason for the arbitrament of the sword, their opposition was compelled to take the form of technical objection and constitutional casuistry. I would be incking in frankness, however, if I did not say that there was plausibility in the reason assigned by the majority these presented. Article 31 of The Hague convention provides that the powers who resort to arbitration shall sign a special net of submission, in which the powers who resort to arbitration shall sign a special uct of submission, in which the powers who resort to arbitration shall sign a special uct of submission, in which the powers who resort to arbitration shall sign a special uct of submission, in which the powers of the alforence shall be precisely defined, as well asthe extent of the powers of the eightration, shall conclude a special agreement, which they were presented. "Without challenging the sincerity or intelligence of those who adhere to this view, we may indulge the hope that the friends of arbitration in the Senate (and we have no right to assume that all its members are not such) will find a way by which the government of the United States, through its treaty making power, may John the other civilized nations of the world in binding itself to submit "differences which may arise of a legal nature, or gefatege to the interpretation of treaties existing between the two contracting parles, and which it may not have been possible to active by diplomacy, to the permanent court of urbitration establishing at The Hague, without requiring the merely subordinate agreement as to procedure in each case, to be ratified by two-thirds of the Senate. To say that this cannot be done, would argue a degree of imbecility and weakness in our Federal government that I do not bolieve exists. The treaty-making powers, as conferred by the Constitution on the President and the Senate, is without expressed limitation or restriction, and it is surely broad concign to authorize a evening by broad concign to authorize a prescribed line of conduct with reference to future contingencies. Dr. Trueblood said in part:

"On the whole the year has been one of gratifying progress for the cause in whose interests we gather here. The friends of arbitration, not in this country only, but in all countries of Western Europe, have largely increased in numbers, and have carried on a vigorous and unremitting campaign.

The construction of the progress of the year, withstanding all the progress of the year, withstanding all the progress of the overcome. The chief of these are the inertia of public opinion, the stubbornness of old prejudices between the nations, racial animosities, false conceptions of commercial interests and of national honor and greatness, and a certain fondness still lingering in the minds and hearts of the peoples and governments for the machinery of war and the supposedly speedler method offered by war for the securing and mainte"In our constructive work for the complete and permanent establishment and universal use of international justice.

Ju 1-1mo Collector of City Taxos. DEMAND REMOVAL OF PRESIDENT

Rev. John Gordon Refused to Associate With Negro Students and Faculty.

WASHINGTON, May 31.—Because Rev. John Gordon, president of Howard University, and a white man, has raised the race question at the negro college by declining to associate on a social equality plane with the student body and faculty, and has sought to emphasize the importance of manual training, a committee of alumni, backed by the entire undergraduate body, to-day preferred charges against him and petitioned the board of trustees for his immediate removal.

The formal charges, pressed by former Representative White, of North Carolina, and argued at length before a special meeting of the trustees, follow what has been almost open revolt at the college on the part of the student body during the past few days.
